As a user, once you search for what you want to buy on amazon.ca. You get a choice, do you want to pay less for something but have it take a month or pay more and have it in a week. This is the first choice the user has to make and for me this is the moment of truth, is it worth it to pay extra to have it sooner or do you wait to save some money. For me I love to save money and if I have to wait a little bit that's fine. This is a positive quality to have for customers. If they need by a certain time, they have options. If they don't mind a used collection they can also save money there as well.

At this Stage you are selecting the shipping. This is good if you wanted to send a gift to someone's house as a surprise for them to find. But if you just wanted to buy something for yourself, this step is not needed. I would have liked a button that would let me skip this step and just go right to payment with the option to edit my address if I felt the need to. So this has a positive and a negative quality to it. For me it is an extra step that I don't need.

Now we are onto the payment stage. Here we can choose a method of payment from the 3 major credit cards or, a amazon gift card. If you have used them before you can use a saved credit card.
